

SLUMBERING FALLS TOWNSHIP NOW WIDE AWAKE THESE SUMMER DAYS WITH ROARING BULLDOZERS AND GIANT TRUCKS AS NEW TOWN SPRINGS UP ON FERTILE FARMLANDS

Town of Fairless Being Built As A Speculative Venture by John Galbreath — Huge Staff Must Plan All Angles of Community Development — A Complete Self-Contained Community is Planned.

The hazy, slumbering farmlands of Falls township are being sharply awakened these summer mornings by the roaring bulldozers and giant trucks of John W. Galbreath's town-building Danherst Corporation.

On a site marked previously only by meadow mists and cowpats, Galbreath is directing a small army of men in the planning and construction of a town of more than 10,000 people. From within a two-century-old farmhouse in the center of over 1200 acres of open countryside, he and his staff are creating a new kind of housing project, "more than a real estate development, a self-contained community resembling in design the typical early American Community of 1800."

The new town, in Falls Township, Fairless is being built by Galbreath as a speculative venture to provide industrial housing for an estimated 4,000 to 5,000 workers brought into the area by U. S. Steel and related industries this year and next.

U. S. Steel at the same time, is in the process of erecting the largest steel plant ever to be built at one time—located on the banks of the Delaware River, in Falls Township. Some of the factors behind U. S. Steel's move East were listed as: (1) the need for strategic dispersion of all industrial production, and (2) the necessity of decentralized steel production in order to meet regional price differentials coming out of the recent basing-point decision of the Supreme Court.

Other industries using steel in various forms are expected to relocate nearby for accessibility to their source of basic raw material. Their employees will swell the ranks of thousands of potential home-seekers in the region, putting excessive pressure on housing facilities, were it not for Galbreath's bold planning.

Galbreath, a Columbus, Ohio realtor and part-owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates, has had wide experience in large-scale building and community development throughout the country. His staff of lawyers, buyers, construction men, accountants, engineers and salesmen operates on a project such as Fairless with all the sureness of a well-coached team on the playing field. Their problems are not typical of average real estate development work, since customarily they must come into completely undeveloped territory and provide integrated community services starting with country land and ending with a town hall.

For example, while one part of the Fairless staff is concerning itself with development of independent, state-approved, sewage and water supply systems, another group will be busy meeting with local governing bodies to discuss a new school system. Not only must physical facilities be provided for such community services, but close cooperation must be maintained with local groups so that they may provide the necessary governmental - fiscal authorization in order that the community may later run its own services properly.

For the community which Galbreath's staff is working to create, will eventually become bigger than its creators, will begin to take a part in local government, help provide its own internal management.

and as a youth leaving home, will strike out for itself among the other communities of the locality. Into a space of two or three years, Fairless will have condensed the average town's growing experience of a century, arriving fresh on the scene with benefit of the latest and soundest of modern community planning practices.

It is in this complex, largely uncharted area of activity that Galbreath's men have learned to operate efficiently. They are of a new real estate school. They talk zoning restrictions, dwelling densities, trash collection, ceiling heights of retail stores, site environment, slope of road crowns, church plots and ceiling joists. They know how many yards of concrete it takes to pour a three foot foundation for a house 24 by 40 feet; how to plot buffer areas between shopping and living centers; how to lay out city blocks to conform with lines of local traffic flow; how much fire equipment is needed to give adequate protection to a given number of homes. These men are community experts.

The homes they are putting up illustrate Galbreath know-how. As

THE WAR

U. S. EIGHTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, KOREA — Allied troops on the east central Korean front plugged forward on their "limited objective attack" despite mud and rain Wednesday and shot patrols to the apex of the deserted iron triangle. UN units probed northward into the deserted iron triangle city of Pyonggang without meeting Red opposition. Elsewhere on the front, action was confined to patrol clashes.

PEACE TALKS

UN TRUCE CAMP NEAR KAESONG — The Reds promised tonight to keep their troops out of the Korean truce conference site but formally accused the Allies of two military violations against the neutrality of Kaesong and a road leading to it. They asked renewal of the talks, telling Gen. Ridgway the inobservance of Kaesong will be respected unless the Allies harbor the "intention" of "provoking" incidents to end the negotiations. In another message, the Reds protested against what they termed two attacks by UN forces in violation of Kaesong's demilitarized zone and the purported immunity of a North Korean highway to the conference city.

GRATITUDE

Uncle Sam is pouring out the wealth of the American people in the field of international politics, trying to buy gratitude.

A great deal of your income is going for this purpose. In this nation, there are more and more types of public works where we are forced to get along with less than we would like, less than we ought to be able to afford, simply because so incredibly many billions of our dollars are being turned over to foreign races who will not or cannot support themselves satisfactorily.

But gratitude is the dearest purchase in all the world! You can't buy it and put it away for a rainy day — you have to buy it over and over again. That is true to a great extent with individuals—true a thousandfold with nations.

Heaven help Uncle Sam if he ever gets caught in a hot corner and has to rely on the friends he has "bought!"

Even in so relatively minor a matter as the outbreak of the Korean War saw our "buddies" hitting for the tall timber. England, for example, had been comparatively eager to stand boldly beside us, while the weather was fair—but when it looked like a war with the Asiatic Communists, what did she do? She suddenly remembered her trade agreements with Russia. She remembered that she may have an election coming up soon, and war would mean high prices, and high prices might overthrow her socialist government.

Instead of standing up boldly for what we stood for because it was right, or instead of sticking loyally to us because we were her "friends," England began looking around for something she could use to appease the Reds. England urged us to recognize Red China in the United Nations, and to give up the key strategic island of Formosa, as a means of buying peace.

If there was such a thing as buying gratitude, we would never have to worry again about Russia's enmity.

TRYING TO COMBAT INFECTION FOR SEAL

Penicillin Administered To Animal in Phila.; Has Eaten Some Food

FEW IN CAPTIVITY

Bulletin from "Red-side" of the Seal

1. Condition — Fair
 2. Infection — Definitely
 3. Sex — Undetermined
 4. Name — To be given when item 3 is answered.
- At present resting in "Beaver Ward" Philadelphia "Zoo" (pool formerly occupied by beavers)

A consultation has been held in Phila. at the pool "bed-side" of the sick hooded seal snared along the Delaware River front at the rear of the Elks home, here, yesterday noon.

After the seal reached Philadelphia "Zoo", following some strategy which resulted in its capture with nets, here, Frederick Ulmer, curator of mammals at the "Zoo", consulted with Dr. Herbert L. Ratcliffe, director of Penrose Research Laboratory there.

The decision reached was that the seal is "not in the best of health." The "Zoo" officials feel that it would have been even more difficult to capture the animal had it been in top-notch condition.

To combat infection penicillin has been administered. A few sore spots were noted in the seal's mouth, also. The seal has eaten a little food it is stated.

Far from Greenland—believed to be its home-land—it is thought the seal possibly did not fare well when it turned from the Atlantic ocean, and entered the Delaware River. Roger Conant, curator at the Phila. Zoo.

INTEREST IN PLANNING

The Bucks County Planning Commission has submitted the names of A. Walter Fretz, Thomas Stockham and Charles Meredith as members of the Southeastern Regional Planning Commission. It was announced at the regular meeting of the commission in Doylestown, Tuesday afternoon.

The Southeastern Planning Commission has been organized to correlate activities of planning commissions in Bucks, Montgomery, Delaware and Chester counties and to discuss problems common to the four counties.

Commission Chairman, A. Walter Fretz, also announced that he had received a regional highway map from the Montgomery County Planning Commission indicating the route of the proposed extension of the Pennsylvania Turnpike which would connect with the New Jersey Turnpike. The road would start from King of Prussia, cut across Route 309 below Fort Washington and across Route 611 south of Horsham and cut just north of Langhorne. It would cross the Delaware River in Edgely and meet with the New Jersey turnpike near Bordentown.

Interest in the use of planning boards is mounting throughout Bucks and neighboring counties. This increased interest is indicated by borough and township planning as well as planning on the county level. Morrisville Borough, Falls township and Makefield townships are already cooperating in an area planning movement. Quakertown borough councilmen are studying an ordinance at this time in regard to the establishment of a Quakertown planning commission. The adjacent townships of Richland and Melford are also interested in associating planning board so that areas adjacent to the borders of Quakertown, Richland and Melford can be planned more efficiently for development purposes.

Julius Meszaros and Joseph Kish, Fallsington, were appointed as police officers in addition to chief-of-police, Franklin Kirby. They will resume their duties Aug. 15th.

The development of Danherst project was discussed.

Examination and approval was made of a plaque plan and road profile plan of streets for Unit A, between Oxford Valley and Hulmeville roads, on the former Messer farm. The above will be filed at the Records Office, Doylestown.

The resignation of Frank B. Davenport, Sr., as civil defense director of the township, was received. Joseph Winder was selected to succeed Mr. Davenport.

ENDORSE EFFORTS OF MARTIN FOR DEFENSE AREA

Greater Phila.-South Jersey Council Issues Statement

WANT HOME OWNERS

Housing Program Should Have Owner-Occupancy As Purpose

By International News Service PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9 — Wallace G. Murfit, chairman of the Bucks County Division of the Greater Philadelphia-South Jersey Council, said yesterday that any housing program designed for Bucks County should have as its purpose erection of houses for owner occupancy rather than for rental.

"Bucks County wants home owners," he said, "persons whose interest in their jobs, in their homes, and in their neighbors and neighborhoods, will root deeply into Bucks County soil and Bucks County traditions."

Murfit pointed out that the new steel mill in Morrisville will bring many new residents and he expressed agreement with Sen. Edward Martin's plea for classification of the county as a critical housing area.

In a statement released to the press by Wallace G. Murfit, chairman of the council, the group said: "On Monday August 6th, in the United States Senate, Senator Martin proposed that Bucks County be declared a critical housing area so that Federal funds could be made available for a housing program to shelter persons who may move into the area, many of whom will be employed at the Fairless Works of U. S. Steel. His remarks had reference to Federal Senate Bill 349, relative to housing sponsored by, but not built by, Federal Authority. Housing for workers must be ready when industries now promised to be built begin to function in Lower Bucks County. Furthermore, the housing should be priced proportionate to the budget of the workers, and in quantities to fit the incomes of the various brackets."

"It is the opinion of members of the Bucks County Division of the Greater Philadelphia-South Jersey Council that a good, workable housing bill should be written. But any program should have as its purpose the erection of houses for owner-occupancy. We want owners in Bucks County—persons whose interest in their homes will root deeply into Bucks County soil and Bucks County traditions."

MENACE OF HATLESSNESS

Another peril confronting the free world has been discovered. The spreading fashion of hatlessness is destroying the livelihood of milliners and hatmakers in Europe. In their desperation, they will be highly receptive to communism. This alarming report is brought by Nathaniel Spector, manager of the New York joint board of the Millinery Workers Union, AFL.

Mr. Spector was "appalled" by the low state of the hat in Paris and other style centers. He is afraid that American tourists who have seen many men and women without hats in Europe will return to spread the cult in the United States. He wants employers and unions to sponsor a hat conference in Paris to start a worldwide promotion campaign extolling the virtues of hats.

Mr. Spector claims similar campaigns in the United States and Britain a few years ago had gratifying results. Maybe so. But fashion does not always respond to propaganda, especially when its self-interest is made so obvious. The hat may indeed be going the way of the horse-drawn carriage, gold-headed canes, wigs, ruffs, stocks and farthingales, all the makers of which must have complained bitterly about the injury done them by changing fashion. Or it may be that the hat is merely in temporary eclipse.

Leg makeup proved unsatisfactory and women went back to stockings. The whalebone corset disappeared, only to return as a foundation garment, more costly than ever. The petticoat is making a fast comeback, it is said. Among men, suspenders have alternated in popularity with belts, and garters have gone and come. The waistcoat is currently in a decline and so is the undershirt. Both may return.

European example has little influence. In the United States the hatless man is common in summer, but most men continue to cover their heads in cool weather. Among American women the eye veil, the kerchief or a handful of artificial flowers preserve millinery traditions, even if they are the merest nod in the direction of the art.

So all is not lost. Let the hatless men and hatresses not hasten too swiftly to Moscow. In the Soviet Union nothing so whimsical as fashion is permitted. State edict governs what shall be worn. If the Krentlin should cut hats out of the party line, where would the communist milliners be?

Federal government owns 84 per cent of the land in Nevada, 71 per cent in Utah and 60 per cent in Arizona. What is the government trying to do—catch up to Russia?

Latest complaint concerning current literature concerns format. Covers of books are too far apart, it is alleged.

Russia is reported to be worried over the atomic bomb. The Kremlin probably yearns for a return of the good old days of Yalta, too.

is typical of the best of the big housing developments, Fairless community will offer the buyer neat, attractive and well-built homes at a price within reach of families of moderate means. Each dwelling is landscaped and shrubbed, offers many built-in conveniences: television aerials hidden beneath the roof, garbage disposal units, electric ranges, automatic clothes-washers. Most of the houses will be Gunnison pre-fabricated houses of varying size. There will be a goodly number of homes custom-built according to the design of Fairless architects, or in some cases to the specifications of private buyers, where such is in keeping with Bucks County tradition.

But there, any similarity between Fairless and other developments ends. Danherst Corporation executives have planned a complete, self-contained community for their buyers, so laid out and designed that it will resemble a model Pennsylvania colonial village when finally completed. Richard Tully and Harold Field Kellogg, architects retained by Galbreath to design the civic center and its facilities, regard their problem as unique.

"Our assignment," they state, "is to create a new pattern of residential life for industrial workers, to make a modern, functional living center of Fairless, give it all the business and civic services Fairless People will demand, yet design it in the authentic styling of an early Pennsylvania-Dutch community."

Their work has been aided by the services of Seward H. Mott, noted Washington, D. C. urban land planner. Contrary to the usual tendency of urban developers to seize upon unbroken, flat stretches of land for row upon row of monotonous housing, Mott and Galbreath chose a gently-sloping valley for their site. They thereby got more than 90% of their land on one watershed (aiding them in solving sewage and drainage problems), still had plenty of height above river-level to avoid danger of flooding from Delaware lowlands.

Slowly-curling Fairless streets will wind their way around this valley, house rows pleasingly irregular in their placement and relative height. From opposite sides of the valley, citizens of Fairless will look down upon their civic center, their village inn and their beautiful recreation areas around Queen Anne Creek. They'll have the privilege of picnicking by the side of Lake Caroline and its sparkling falls, both located adjacent to the town common, in the valley center. Quite an idyllic scene... yet with steel plant entrances only four miles away!

"We hope to re-create the atmosphere of early colonial times at Fairless," says Galbreath. "But more than that, we are working to build a community in which people can live a complete life—take part in their government and share a common living experience. There's too much living apart nowadays."

"A real community, such as Fairless will be, is our answer to some of the forces attempting to weaken our democratic system. After all, it was in this very region, and in the form of an early colonial village such as Fairless, that our democratic process got its first start in life!"

In the meantime, the physical form of this new community concept is rapidly taking recognizable shape. Construction crews are erecting houses at the rate of eight a day, will be completing 16 a day by the first of September. Danherst goals call for completion of 1100 houses by year's end, with the first group of houses now being occupied.

The dismantled housing units arrive by rail, complete down to the last bolt and kitchen cabinet, and are assembled quickly, since all designing and fitting is done in advance. Multiple color schemes and differing elevations are made use of liberally and attractively.

On the site of the first group of houses, the dust and noise, the hurrying of many figures, the clamor of many machines, the skilled movements of painters, carpenters, plumbers, electricians, cement men, power company technicians, telephone linemen, graders, ditch-diggers and welders, all combine to lend an excitement to the scene typical of a booming oil field.

Yet there is system in the apparent confusion, and out of it all is rising Fairless, a new kind of community life brought back to the East by the sons of the West.

Horse Efforts of Martin For Defense Area

In their jobs, in their homes, in their neighbors and neighborhoods, they root deeply into Bucks County soil and Bucks County tradition. Rental housing, on the other hand, has its economic foundation in the multi-family housing designed for congested areas where supply of land is at a minimum. Rental housing is inherently temporary in its type of occupancy. It is not a family that doesn't move forward to the time of owning its own home. Under the circumstances, it is felt that tenant occupancy does not insure a stable economic situation.
We hope that people who move to Bucks will become substantial Bucks County citizens who take a lively interest in their community affairs.
The Bucks County Division of Greater Philadelphia-South Jersey Council therefore heartily urges Senator Martin's stand regarding making our County a Defense Area and encouraging an owner-occupied housing program.

The Russians would be our friends forever. Didn't we save them from Hitler at the peak of his power — save them with millions of money, with men and material, with blood and anguish during the Murmansk days?

And having saved Russia, having given her the wherewithal to beat the Germans back, finding her prostrate and exhausted, did we not surrender our own professed principles to build Russia up again? — build her up with the loot and manpower and resources of all the Balkan states, with all of Poland, with half of Germany, with Czechoslovakia and most of Austria, with Manchuria and the Kuriles, eventually with all of China, with a throttling grip on loyal little Finland, with other scraps and tidbits too numerous to list?

True, the property and independence of these nations was not ours to give, but we gave them anyway — surely Russia ought to be grateful to us! We even tore up and tossed away that pious fabricated sham, the so-called "Atlantic Charter" with its Four imaginary freedoms.

Yet with all this exuberant generosity to Russia, with these gifts our own possessions and those of other people, the Russians show not a whit of gratitude. Nor have we any assurance at all that our rich presents to other nations will be remembered (and our betrayal of a long list of those who trusted us forgotten) and produce the expected gratitude in our hour of need.

Consider the cases of two of the key nations whom our government is courting with reckless expenditure of your money.

Great national hero of France, for example, is Joan of Arc. Back in the late Middle Ages, Joan saved France. Lone-handed, offered nothing but discouragement by the nation's rulers, she rallied the French people and drove the British back.

Was France grateful? Travel through France today, and you might think so—seeing portraits and statues, hearing songs, watching plays, and finding tributes in a thousand other forms.

But at the time, what did France do? Traded the Girl from Domremy over to the British to be tried as a witch, suffered them to burn her at the stake as a heretic, permitted her to remain for years in infamy as disowned by both her beloved nation and her revered church!

Or take the case of England. That merry old muddling land wound up in deep trouble, back in 1939 and 1940. For years her rulers had treated the rise of Hitler as a huge joke. Business as usual was Britain's motto, and Chamberlain with his umbrella and his appeasement was her guide. When Chamberlain sold the peace of the world away at Munich, England received him home as a conquering hero, and clasped him to her breast.

A year later, this wave of gratitude was forgotten, and the British let Chamberlain retire in shame and scorn and disgrace.

She welcomed into office a hero and valiant statesman, a man who had courageously protested, step by step, the course of conduct which had led to the impending disasters. Churchill seized the reins and almost lone-handed mustered England's resources to fight back the threatened German invasion.

With a short interlude of blood, sweat, toil and tears, 1945 found England safe and free, rescued by the bravery and vision of one man just as clearly as Joan of Arc alone saved France.

And what was England's reward? How did she show her gratitude? She threw Churchill summarily out, discarded him for half-baked imitations of the very school of fuddled thinking which had produced the Hitler from which she had just escaped!

If France traded Joan of Arc away for her enemies to burn, and if England booted Churchill out of office ignominiously, as their rewards for these national saviors—what on earth can we expect in the way of "gratitude" for anything we can do for these countries?

DO YOU COOK BACON CORRECTLY

Bacon has an established spot in the day's menu. But are you getting the most for your money? Are you cooking bacon correctly?
Reba Staggs, meat expert, gives these suggestions for serving bacon at its finest. The prime rule to remember is always cook bacon slowly. Never allow the fat to smoke. Bacon may be cooked by any one of three methods — in your oven, your broiler and, of course, in a frying pan on top of the range.

When surface cooking, place the bacon in a cool frying pan and cook slowly until the bacon is a golden brown. It is necessary to pour off the drippings during cooking so that the bacon will not cook in its own fat. Also, it is necessary to turn the slices frequently for even cooking.

If you're serving a large group it is convenient to use your oven since little watching is required. Simply place the bacon on a rack in your roasting pan and cook in a 300 degree F. oven until the meat is golden. When using your broiler, place the bacon about 2 inches from the heat so that it will cook slowly.

"Too" feels that the seal picked up some infection in the river water. "The river is polluted, and the seal would have no immunization, having spent all of its life in the sterile environment of the Atlantic ocean," he states.

Although it is most unusual for a seal to be found in the Delaware and particularly this far from the ocean, one other was found at Florence, N. J., about 15 years ago. "They are great wanderers," adds Mr. Conant, "not in schools, but alone."

The old harbor pond, where the seal is now "living," is about four feet at the deepest spot.

The zoological gardens in Philadelphia have no other seals. "Hooded seals are hard to get, and hard to keep in captivity," Mr. Conant informs. "As far as we know there are no other hooded seals in 'zoos' in the U. S."

Mr. Umler states that elephant seals closely related to the hooded type, have occasionally been seen in U. S. "zoos". The so-called trained "seals" found in many shows, are in reality sea lions, Mr. Umler enlightens.

When queried as to whether a name has yet been given the seal, Mr. Conant replied in the negative, adding that the sex has not been determined.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Lewis and sons Hugh and Ralph, Prosperity, N. C., were guests from Thursday of last week until Monday of Mr. Lewis' brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lewis, Taft street. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis and son Robert, and their guests spent the week-end at their cottage at Beach Haven, N. J.

Today's Quiet Moment

By Donald E. May
Pastor
Eddington Presbyterian Church

"If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." 1 John 1:9

Oh Heavenly Father, my sins are many. I have sinned in word by becoming angry. I have sinned in thought by thinking conceitedly, covetously, and selfishly. I have sinned in deeds whenever I have deliberately been mean rather than kind, too busy to be helpful, and too independent to be guided of Thee.

I thank Thee that in Christ I have been forgiven. Send quickly the cleansing power of the Holy Spirit that I may speak as I ought to speak, think as I ought to think, and do as I ought to do.
